Day 4: Cape Town

The drama of Cape Peninsula's halcyon landscape leads you to Cape Point on the southwestern tip of Africa. Marvel at nature's color wheel – shades of green that blanket rocky outcrops and cerulean waters that form into waves and crash into a brilliant lavender blue. Bartolomeau Dias, the first European to reach the Cape, named it the Cape of Storms, but it was re-named Cape of Good Hope by Portugal's King John II when it opened a sea route to the East. Among mystic mountaintops over open seas, set out on an easy hike down mountain, passing through one of the world's six floral kingdoms. End at Boulders Beach for the rarest of black-tie events – a rendezvous with endangered African penguins! This evening, find yourself an honored guest for dinner at a Capetonian family's home. Dine, exchange stories, and share a true "day-in-the-life" experience. End the evening with happy memories and lifelong friends.
